The ATTORNEY-GENERAL-I have now to move that the Council resume the consideration et the Ordinance for the regulation and print-ing of newspapers and books and the keeping of Bill was postponed from last week, having been adjourned as I understand it, for the purpose of enabling me to inform the Council with reference to the state of English law regulating matters of this kind, at the suggestion of my hon. friend (Hon. Jackson). I may state that the regulations the forms of registration connected there with are of a different character from those required in the confidence held by the home and local offices body of this Ordinance. On the whole as illustrated by their market price and last think they are not so stringent—certainly the penalties are not so stringent as those dividends it is, however, necessary to take which are provided by our local Ordinance juto account the difference in the value of as regards newspapers. I have endeavoured to point out to the Council that if an omission were made from the Bill of this particular subsection we are now upon, a gap would be made in the provisions of the Ordinance, which would render the protection which the Ordinance is calculated to furnish to the public against newspapers incomplete and imperfect. If any hon, member has any provision to make by which that protection can be furnished in some other manner, am sure the suggestion would be most carefully considered, and it will be seen what can be done with it. But at present I do not think that any suggestion has been made by any hon. member of the Council as to how the law is to be carried out on the point in question consistently with the meaning of Subsection 3.

The law has been put in force, not for the purpose of enforcing these particular provisions, but for dealing with the guilty persons; and as soon as the responsible parties were found the Attorney-General instituted a prosecution under this Ordinance. It is only a means to an end. The law of England is now different, but this Ordinance was taken from gent parts of it were omitted from local Ordinance. We here find an increase in the attendance over the former year, and, as indicating the wide field of the cepital's work, we may say that the patients treated during the year comprise some from 17 provinces and Manchuria and Mongolia. From Hunan they number hundreds, and from the most of the provinces we kave them as In-patients. That they will be found to be mainly coldiers is apparent.

Regarding the charge for medicines, to out-patients instituted at the last annual meeting, without enterbe readily accounted for by other circumstances.

The publications of the various medical books and irentises already issued is an increasingly important feature of the Society's work. The revised Materia Medica is in the press; a large diagram of the internal ergans has been published during the year, and several publications are in progress. In the Appendix relating to the semi-Centennial Anniversary there will 16 found a resume on this and various subjects, including a calendar chimportant events in the fifty years of the Hospital and Society's existence. The Medical Class has been continued as usual, and contains a number of specially promising young men; two or three native dectors have inquired as to the teaching. We should welcome any inclination on the part of Chinese Doctors to take up with Western practice, and believe that at no very distant day, as in Japan, there will be a movement towards the adoption of more or less of that form of practice, and

This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of more trouble in the end.
